10. The right to object to direct marketing

People have the right to decide whether or not they wish their information to be used for direct marketing purposes. Hogarth Charitable Trust offers the option to "opt-out" of receiving marketing materials. Anyone can opt-out at any time and Hogarth Charitable Trust must respect this and amend records to ensure mailings no longer continue.

11. Other requests for access

Sometimes Hogarth Charitable Trust is contacted by third parties who would like access to client records.

If the police contact you for data, you should confirm with the police that the reason for the request is that they wish to contact a named individual about a named criminal investigation (regardless of whether that individual is a suspect or witness) and that failure to release the data would prejudice the investigation. Most police forces will have their own request form which should always include a statement confirming that the information requested is required for the purposes covered in Section 29 of the Data Protection Act, a brief outline of the nature of the investigation and the subject's role in that investigation, and the signature of the investigating officer. This document must be obtained prior to the release of any information. All requests from the Police should be sent to the Youth Officer or Hogarth Charitable Trust Trustees for action.
